The Media Studies Department provides hands-on opportunities in mass/mediated communication. These practicum opportunities include Dixie Sun News, a student-produced newspaper, website (<http://www.dixiesunnews.com>) and TV broadcast (<https://www.youtube.com/communityeducationchannel>); 91.3, a broadcast radio station; the Community Education Channel (<http://www.cectvutah.com>), a local television station and international streaming service; and Insight Communications, a marketing, advertising, and public relations agency. By participating in these practical experiences, students in the Media Studies program graduate with, not only a bachelor's degree, but also a portfolio of work that demonstrates their ability to be successful in media employment. Students can begin participating as early as their freshman year, oftentimes with no prior experience. Scholarships (<http://financialaid.dixie.edu/scholarships>) are also available for some students who participate in these experiences. For more information, contact Dr. Dave Harris at (435) 879-4269.
